Highlights of Statistical Tables

A significant reduction has been made to the 2002 and 2003 import data for burley, oriental, and dark air-cured tobacco. Post believes that previous reports inadvertently used kilograms instead of metric tons. This report uses trade data derived from Chinese Customs. The production data are obtained from China's National Statistics Bureau (NSB).

Production Summary & Outlook

The production forecast remains consistent with past production trends. As the table below shows, flue-cured tobacco remains the dominant tobacco grown in China.
