Weekly rice report - BRUSSELS, January 4, 2000

(1) MARKET SUMMARY

Quiet U.S. rice markets have left nearly all prices unchanged. Regular brown rice became somewhat cheaper with mills now having sufficient capacity available to meet demand. Low demand in this market segment may lead to further price decreases in the near term. Parboiled rice prices remain strong due to good demand and limitations in parboiling capacity.

Thai prices were left unchanged due to lack of substantial business. Reportedly, Indonesia has set import taxes on rice, a factor which may restrain markets in the Far East in the near future.

Given that no EU grain management committee meetings took place on December 23 and 30, no free market export subsidies for rice were set. EU rice markets are very quiet, only slowly awakening after the year-end holidays. During the first week of January, EU importers of TRQ rice have to submit applications for import licenses.
