USDA China - Scott’s New Year Greeting:

Hello from the Agricultural Affairs Office in Beijing! I hope everyone had a restful holiday and will have a wonderful year of the dragon! We are happy to send out our second monthly newsletter covering issues related to all seven of our USDA offices across China. I hope you found the first issue to be useful. We are hoping that more and more U.S. producer associations will provide us with even more materials so we can share their successes with our friends and colleagues back home. The China market continues to grow at a rapid rate! Our 2011 fiscal year trade numbers show greater than 30% increase over the previous year which was also a record. Things slowed down during the holiday period, but we are optimistic we will have another record year in 2012. Our USDA China offices are quite busy managing multiple market development programs and assisting more and more American agricultural/food related companies enter the China market. We are also working on a number of trade policy related issues and are looking forward to our first ever Agricultural symposium that will be held in Iowa in mid-February as part of Vice President Xi Jinping’s visit to the United States. The Symposium will be hosted by both USDA Secretary Vilsack and China’s Agriculture Minister Han. Vice President Xi is expected to help open the event. We will provide a read out of the symposium in the March issue of our newsletter. In the meantime, my colleagues and I look forward to serving your needs related to agricultural trade issues between China and the United States. Xin Nian Kuai Le!!!

Sincerely,

Scott Sindelar
Agricultural Minister Counselor

Annual USAPEEC Trade Appreciation Event: The USA Poultry and Egg Export Council coordinated its annual trade appreciation event on January 13, 2012 at the Chimelong Hotel in Panyu which is in southern China outside Guangzhou where large volumes of US poultry traditionally enter China. This marked the fourteenth anniversary of the event. More than 550 guests participated in the events including mini-trade show, seminar, and trade reception. Guests included importers, traders and wholesalers from Panyu, Shenzhen, Anhui, Shanghai, Suzhou, Nanjing, Wuxi, Chengdu, Chongqing, Hangzhou, Qingdao, Dalian, Beijing and Hong Kong.

In conjunction with the annual U.S. Poultry reception, USAPEEC conducted a mini food show for the Chinese importers/traders on the morning of Jan 13. The show attracted 15 American sponsors and over 200 importers. Both suppliers and importers had great opportunities to meet face to face and discuss issues such as the current market situation, policy issues, product quality issues, etc. Attending the cocktail reception included Jim Sumner, the president of USAPEEC, Scott Sindelar, Minister-Counselor for Agricultural Affairs, U.S. Embassy in Beijing; and ATO staff from Beijing, Guangzhou and Hong Kong.

USSEC Aids Dairy Nutrition Development in China:
the US Soybean Export Council (USSEC) China recently hosted a series of seminars on dairy nutrition and management in the Chinese cities of Urumqi of Xinjiang, Hohhot of Inner-Mongolia, Shenyang of Liaoning, Jinan of Shandong, and Beijing. These five regions represent nearly 60 percent of dairy production in China. More than 440 representatives from various dairy production companies attended the seminars. Michael Brouk, Ph.D., and Keith Behnke, Ph.D., both from Kansas State University, presented nutrition and management strategies for high yield dairy herds and feed processing technologies for dairy production. Jack Cheng, Ph.D., USSEC animal utilization technical consultant and Sam Shi, Ph.D., discussed the application of full-fat soybean meal and soy hulls in dairy rations.

As a result of increasing demand for quality dairy products, the Chinese government has dedicated more resources in the development of the dairy industry. Key government influencers, Wang Junxun, Director of the State Dairy Industry Office and Qiao Yufeng, Vice President of the China Animal Agriculture Association also attended the seminars. U.S. soybean grower leaders, United Soybean Board (USB) and USSEC staff attended the seminar in Beijing and also visited Sanyuan Lvhe, the largest state-owned dairy company in the city. Li Xizhi, deputy director of the Animal Raising Center discussed with the U.S. leaders the dairy operations in Beijing and other nutrition issues. Former USB chairman, Marc Curtis also presented a report on U.S. soybean production and quality during the Beijing seminar.

Chinese Government to Promote Domestic Alfalfa Production On June 1, 2011, details of an alfalfa seed subsidy were published by The State Council in a document entitled, “Opinions on Promoting the Sound and Rapid Development of the Pastoral Region.” According to this document, a subsidy will be provided to encourage forage grass production. The central government will offer RMB 10 per mu as a seed subsidy in Inner Mongolia, Xinjiang, Tibet, Qinghai, Sichuan, Gansu, Ningxia, and Yunnan. The central government will also provide RMB 500 per household to subsidize production inputs such as fuels (e.g. diesel). YesMyWine imported wine on-line sales opportunities in China
Established in 2008, the three-year-old www.yesmywine.com (YMW) website sells on average nearly 3,000 bottles of imported wine per day. The founder said it is the third largest retailer for imported wine in China, just after Carrefour and Metro. Its sales revenue has tripled annually over the past three years. YMW has more than 400,000 active members. Unlike the legal limitations in the States, the commerce of wine and liquor between different provinces in China is quite smooth and straightforward. YMW is able to sell wine nationwide, with Shanghai, Beijing and Guangzhou being its major target markets. In 2010, YMW started to direct import wine from overseas, mainly from France. It imported over one million bottles in 2011 and is planning to import three to four million bottles in 2012.

It is now looking to expand its American wine portfolio. To better educate wine lovers in China, it is partnering with "Wine Enthusiast", an American magazine, to publish its Chinese version. The first issue will be coming out in April 2012, featuring Yao Ming’s wine from Napa Valley. ATO Shanghai will collaborate with YMW to leverage this online channel with an American wine promotion during the month of July. ATO Shanghai will also work hard to introduce American wine associations and their members to this new channel in the coming weeks and months. In fact, the California Wine Institute just invited the founder of YMW to join a reverse trade mission to California at the end of March. The owner and one of his buyers will also visit wineries in Washington and Oregon after the California visit. ATO Shanghai senior marketing specialist Xu Min will accompany them along with a few other buyers on this exploratory wine tour to the United States.

Ja-e, A new retail concept in China: Ja-e, a new retailer is up and coming in China. Its retail concept is to offer imported products at affordable prices for Chinese consumers. It will limit the selection of each product category and each product will have a story behind it. The vast majority of the products will be purchased directly from the manufacturer passing savings on to the consumers through large volume of sales. The store concept is a cross between a Costco, Crate and Barrel, and Trader Joes.

The company was founded by Mr. Michael Zhu, a visionary who’s family-run business Sunjoy Industries is one of the world’s largest outdoor furniture manufacturers and exports thousands of containers of patio furniture products every year to all the major U.S. retailers like Target, Wal-Mart, Home Depot, Costco etc. Michael started this new retail chain this past year in China market that is just in development stages. Currently, Ja-e has two stores in Shanghai and Hangzhou. The retailer will have up to 20 stores by the end of this year in China coastal cities, together with a very aggressive expansion plan to reach thousands of stores all over China in the coming years.

Mr. Keith Schneller-Director of ATO Shanghai, visiting the Ja-e supermarket in Shanghai
With the help of ATO Shanghai, Ja-e is now importing more than 200 US products ranging from water, chocolates, milk, fruit juice, energy bar, cooking oil, dried nuts, nutrition supplements, etc. They are looking to buy more US food and beverage products in the future as they bring more stores on line. ATO Shanghai has already referred several US companies to Ja-e and is optimistic these companies can grow together with Ja-e in the rapidly developing China market.

"Export Now": Is E-Commerce the "Killer App" for U.S. Food Products in China? American producers now have a quick and easy way to reach new customers in China: e-commerce. More than 150 million Chinese consumers shop on TMall/Taobao, the world's largest e-commerce platform, but historically this platform has been difficult to access for all but the largest U.S. companies. To get posted on TMall, a company has to go through a series of steps and set up warehouse operations, customer fulfillment, and an entire e-commerce structure. Now all of this can be handled by a new company, Export Now, which has opened a TMall department store that will sell your products. Frank Lavin, former Under Secretary of International Trade for the Commerce Department, established Export Now in 2011 to help American companies easily reach new markets.

For U.S. food producers, Export Now handles the entire e-commerce operations chain. "The U.S. distributor just has to get the product to us in Shanghai or we can pick it up in Long Beach," explained Lavin. "We will post the product on TMall, handle transactions and fill the orders. The U.S. company immediately gets national reach."

Export Now takes care of everything in between: language, currency, shipment consolidation and customs. The idea has drawn attention from Forbes (Export to China on the Cheap), Fox Business (Making it Easier for Companies to Export to China), and The Washington Post (Made in America, Shipped to China). Among the first companies to sign up as Export Now partners: Feelgoodz, a Louisiana firm that makes biodegradable flip flops of natural rubber, and Lion Brand Yarn, a New York company that is one of the leading craft suppliers.

Any limitations on food items? At present Export Now will only handle shelf-stable products. "No ice cream, please, for right now" said Lavin. Want to learn how your company can reach new customers throughout China? Click to contact an Export Now adviser.

"Gourmet Tour of American Cuisine"--Ringier Publishing/Betty's Kitchen, Michelin and ATO SH
In collaboration with ATO Shanghai, Betty’s Kitchen is creating a pamphlet that would go out with their May edition of their Betty’s Kitchen magazine. They would circulate around 360,000 of the pamphlets with their magazines that are sold from kiosks around China. Betty’s Kitchen is willing to give US producers a special price on advertising and for sharing article content to be included in the pamphlet. ATO Shanghai will support launch of the pamphlet in late April with a press event to be organized at a popular restaurant in Shanghai. If you have any questions about this project, please contact Susan Zhang direct at susan.zhang@fas.usda.gov.

“Restaurateur” to feature U.S. products in May
Ringier Publishing Company, the official SIAL China newspaper publisher, will produce a series of articles featuring American Food and Beverage products in one of its trade magazines called “Restaurateur” during month of May 2012. This magazine is distributed to more than 25,000 F&B managers, restaurant owners, and chefs across China. It will be handed out at the SIAL China trade show along with the daily SIAL China newspaper. If your company/association would like to place an article or advertisement in one of the Ringier publications during month of May, please contact Howard Lu at howardlu@ringiertrade.com.

Boston Seafood Show, March 9-16
Ms. Leanne Wang, marketing specialist from ATO Shanghai, will pair up with Food Export USA (FEUSA) trade association and accompany four seafood buyers to attend the Boston Seafood Show in mid-March, where Chinese buyers will have the opportunity to participate in activities organized by FEUSA including pre-show, one-on-one meetings and tours of New Bedford Port facilities and local seafood processing plants. U.S. seafood exports to China have been rising rapidly. With increasing incomes and food safety concerns, Chinese consumers prefer to taste and purchase high quality and new species of seafood products from the United States. As a result, seafood exports to China from the United States have been expanding from west coast products typically from Alaska to east coast products such as Maine lobster and Maryland blue crab. Through this mission, we hope to find more new species that will meet Chinese consumers’ tastes and meet ever-increasing demand for high quality seafood products.

TangJiuHui, Chengdu, China, Mar. 23-26
The Tang (candy/sweets) Jiu (spirits) show is China’s largest, domestic food show which takes place every spring in Chengdu and rotates around China for a second show in the fall. It is organized in a very non-traditional way and most Chinese food companies will rent floors in hotels to entertain clients before the show opens. ATO Chengdu is busy preparing for the annual Tang Jiu Hui (Sugar and Spirits Fair), which will be held March 23 - 26 at the New Exhibition Center in Chengdu. “Pre-trade show” events at local hotels are expected to open March 19 and will feature wine, liquor, bakery ingredients, and other confectionery products. While not a USDA-endorsed show, the 2011 show attracted 3600 exhibitors and generated RMB3 billion worth of signed contracts. The afternoon of March 21, the California Wine Institute will host a California wine education seminar for media, followed by ATO Chengdu’s annual U.S. wine tasting event for traders. Interested wineries please contact us at ATOChengdu@fas.usda.gov!
